

I support the ability to use a mobile phone on aircraft while in the air. I see the issue as no concern as far as disrupting other passengers. How is it any different than conversing with a fellow passenger. If a mobile phone user is obtrusive then a fellow passenger can speak to them or a flight attendant.

I am somewhat familiar with the technical issues and am confident that the FCC would ensure that there is no impact on flight control and navigation.